METHOD OF SELLING LAND FOR TAXES IS NOW MADE UNIFORM

Last Legislature Cleans Statute Books of Conflicting Laws.

SOME CONFUSION SINCE 1901

Few Sales in Fayette During Past Decade Because Sheriff's Sales Were Insisted Upon, Instead of the Treasurer's Tax Deed Passing Title.

During the past decade very little real estate of any kind has been sold for taxes in Fayette county. This has not been due to any particular improvement in the business habits of delinquents, but to the fact that a change in the legal procedure not only piled the costs too high for the ordinary speculative mind, but also created a serious doubt as to the validity of the tax title when so obtained. Fayette county was operating under one law and other counties under another.

For many years the unpaid taxes assessed against real estate have been "returned" to the county commissioners, this operation releasing the tax collector from their collection. These taxes on seated and unseated lands were filed of record with the county treasurer and duly advertised in the newspapers. After two years they were sold by the county treasurer at public outcry to satisfy the tax liens. Customarily no more than the amount of the tax and costs were bid. The purchaser was given an acknowledgment, and at the end of two years he might claim a tax deed passing title, provided the real owner did not within that period appear and redeem his lands by paying the amount of the claim together with a bonus of 25%.

Such titles have always been regarded with suspicion in making up a chain of title, though there does not seem to be any valid reason for doubting their validity where properly obtained. However, this feeling existed, and when in 1901 the legislature passed an act intended primarily to provide a proper and uniform practice for filing and collecting municipal liens for paving, claims for abating nuisances and like matters, but which plainly provided that liens might also be filed for taxes, some attorneys conceived that this law supplanted the old law and in its operation furnished a better title for lands sold for taxes. Under the act of 1901, the claims were filed in the office of the prothonotary and had the same effect as judgments, and the property was sold by the sheriff in the same manner as other property is sold on judgment. Sheriff's deeds have never been questioned; sheriffs' deeds were safe; sheriffs' deeds the attorneys would have.

Unfortunately, the costs of selling property by the sheriff were approximately $50, or about ten times the amount of the costs of a sale by the treasurer. The sheriff declined to incur the costs of advertising and other preliminary costs and let them pile up in case of an sale of the property, which under the circumstances was more frequent than otherwise. The commissioners were asked to guarantee the costs, but they could find no authority for so doing. The result was that the practice of selling seated and unseated lands became practically obsolete in this county.

S. M. James, the Connellsville land surveyor, who has had a great deal of experience with tax titles and who called the attention of The Courier to this matter, said: "It is evident that the Legislature did not intend to change the manner of selling seated and unseated lands when they passed the Act of 1901, because we find that at the very next session, they amended the act by declaring that it should not 'apply to taxes on unseated lands.' Just why it was permitted to remain effective so far as seated lands are concerned is not known, but that seems to have been done. However, at the last session of the Legislature the law was further amended by the passage of the Act of May 21, 1913, declaring 'that unseated lands shall hereafter be advertised and sold by the county treasurer at the same time and in the same manner and under the same conditions and with the same effect as unseated lands are now sold by the county treasurer for unpaid taxes.

"I understand that Fayette county is still working under the Act of 1901, though it no longer refers to taxes on seated and unseated lands. Somerset county and a number of other counties have been working under the old law for some time past so far as it was restored by the Act of 1903.

"The chaotic condition caused by this conflicting legislation and the conflict over the costs under the Act of 1901 has served to pile up delinquent taxation and encourage taxpayers in the habit of procrastination. It is to be hoped that better conditions will now prevail."

Not Much Sickness.

After Passenger Business.

C. H. Truesdale, traveling passenger agent of the Illinois Central railroad, was in Connellsville yesterday looking up prospective travelers to the Pacific Coast.

EDITOR WHO IS CENTER OF STATE DEPARTMENT MUDDLE.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—The matter of choosing the next ambassador to Russia has proved a most vexing one for all concerned, from the President down, owing to the publication of the much talked of J. Hamilton Lewis letter. In this letter Senator Lewis is alleged to have told Pindell that he wouldn't have any important work to do; that he could spend his time visiting European capitals and must resign at the end of a year, realizing that he had had a great honor. President Wilson is said to have been very much annoyed at the episode and the appointment of Mr. Pindell was held up. Mr. Pindell is editor of a Peoria (Ill.) newspaper and worked diligently for President Wilson at the Baltimore convention.

WHIPPING POST ACTIVE IN DELAWARE JUSTICE

Two Negroes Receive 20 Lashes Each as a Second Installment of Penalty.

By United Press.

NEW CASTLE, Del., Nov. 15.—Pinioned to a whipping post in the room in the courthouse known as the "torture chamber," two negroes were flogged this morning by Warden Crawford. Twenty lashes today, 20 last Saturday and jail sentences of 11 and 11 years respectively are the sentences of James Bayard and William Beason.

The flogging was guaranteed to be "bloodless" by the warden. It was conducted with scant ceremony. The men were stripped hastily and tied to the post. Then the husky warden applied the scourge to their black backs, 20 times each, while they writhed convulsively. It was over in seven minutes.

An audience of "men only" saw the scourging and some among them declared that the warden was not quite as vigorous about it as on the previous occasion.

"Why, it's a farce today," insisted one man who sees as many of the floggings as he can. "He isn't beating them at all."

FOUR HURT ON DAM

Thrown Into Chest When Wagon Knocks Them Over.

Four men were injured when they were thrown from the side of a coffer dam to the ground at the Hydro-Electric power dam at Cheat Haven, yesterday afternoon. A car of mud which was being unloaded to the dam remained in the car when it was dumped but the bed of the wagon sprang back, knocking the men from the wall.

Jacob Lewis of Pisgah, W. Va., suffered a broken right leg; Finn Degardoyn of Point Marion had his left arm broken; Low Labonda of Cheat Haven, suffered a broken left leg, and Jack Nye, also of Cheat Haven, was bruised and cut about the face.

None of the men were seriously injured. Lewis was brought to the Uniontown Hospital suffering from pesure as well as from his injury. He was compelled to remain in the icy water of the Cheat river until rescued, his broken leg preventing him from climbing out.

STORMY SCENE IN COURT.

Suffragettes Hurl Tomato and Hammer During Trial of "Arsonist."

By United Press.

LONDON, Nov. 15.—In Old Bailey court today, a Suffragist hurled a ripe tomato and a hammer at the head of Justice Lawrence. The hammer shattered the glass back of the bench but the tomato went wild.

The trial of Rachel Pierce, an "arsonist," was on at the time. This was but one of the frequent interruptions for there were cries of "shame" and "unfair" hurled at the justice. Four of the Suffragets were arrested. Miss Pierce was sentenced to serve 18 months at hard labor.

No Flood for Ohio.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 15.—At 9 o'clock the stage of the three rivers at Pittsburg was 20½ feet and it was expected that the crest would be reached at noon. The weather bureau predicts that 21 feet will be the maximum stage.

DECLARE BRIDGE IS DANGEROUS; NEEDS REPAIRS, THEY SAY

Local Men Point Out Flimsy Supports to the Pathway.

MIGHT NOT HOLD UP A CROWD

New City Commission Likely to Demand Immediate Action by County Unless Conditions are Remedied, it is Asserted; Danger in High Water.

The Yough bridge is in serious need of immediate attention on the part of the county, according to several men who informally inspected the structure. Particularly is this true, they assert, of the pathway for pedestrians, which has only frail supports. One of the men, an expert in structural matters, expressed doubt that the sidewalk would sustain 50,000 pounds, or the weight of 500 people. The danger they pointed out, would be in the event of a crowd gathering on the bridge, as it usually does when the river is at flood stage.

It is said that the matter will be taken up by the new city commission unless there is action in the meantime. Not only will the county commissioners be asked to make the repairs necessary to insure the safety of the structure, but police regulations will be enacted to keep pedestrians moving as they cross, and preventing them from congregating at any one spot.

A cursory examination of the structure showed that the vibration caused by the crossing of 150 to 175 trolley cars and many more wagons and automobiles has caused it gradually to tear away from its moorings at the West End. The cracking concrete where the street and bridge meet is held to be ample evidence of this. Observers say that it has become worse within the last few months.

The viewers declared that the main body of the bridge, upon which the trolley cars and wagons run, is comparatively safe, but the sidewalk is dangerous. The iron supports on that part of the bridge underneath which the Baltimore & Ohio engines pass constantly, sending up clouds of smoke and steam, has been worn away until it is not half its original thickness. The corrugated iron upon which the concrete and the wooden pathway rests evinces the same signs of wear on the under side, but it is safe to believe that the unexposed side is wearing down also though probably not in the same degree.

Due to this wearing progress and to the fact that it was never properly supported, the iron railing is wobbly and can be shaken for a distance of 100 feet or more with little effort. The experts say that the brackets should be 11 feet apart instead of 22 feet, in order to insure safety from collapse in case large numbers of people should lean against it, such as often is done in winter to watch the ice breaking up.

But one beam supports the sidewalk and this also showing signs of wear. The experts say there should be at least two more. The cover plates between the bridge proper and the sidewalk are worn through in many places and hundreds of the rivets have been eaten off.

The steps leading downward to Water street should be equipped with new diamond plates, these men say, or someone who falls down them in winter and suffers severe injuries will get damages from the county.

Engineers well up in their profession declare that as a piece of engineering the original structure was very faulty. They point out that it seems to have been built around a telegraph pole near the eastern side. Instead of moving the pole back three feet, the sidewalk was narrowed to four feet and a neat corner built around the pole. This was a nice bit of courtesy to the pole, but it has resulted in much congestion of traffic at that point, where streams of people walking over a 10-foot width are compelled to crowd themselves into less than half that space. Further on down toward the east, however, it widens out to 10 feet and again tapers down as it meets the street. By moving back the pole and constructing the walk so it would gradually taper until it meets the street, a big improvement would be wrought.

A similar condition exists on the West Side where the stone abutment which exists for no reason at all causes a tapering in width from nearly seven feet to less than four. This stone obstruction might be removed and the sidewalk allowed to continue toward the street without obstruction or corners.

It has been suggested that the concrete sidewalk should be extended the full length of the bridge after it had been properly repaired or rebuilt, and the railing constructed of reinforced concrete, which would render it safer, less likely to corrode, and obviate the smoke nuisance.

JUAREZ FALLS INTO HANDS OF REBELS AFTER A BATTLE

Constitutionalists Under General Castro Slip Into Town and Then Open Fight.

By United Press.

EL PASO, Tex., Nov. 15.—Mexican rebels, 2,500 strong, under General Villas, captured Juarez, just across the boundary line, today after a brisk battle in which the Federals under General Castro were routed. The capture resulted in a surprise which began at midnight. The fighting was fierce for four hours.

Three Americans were killed. One was C. G. Sagerson. He had gone across the boundary in an automobile when the firing began, intending to witness the battle. Bullets whizzed over El Paso, causing the United States troops to redouble their energies in patroling the border. The Second and Eighteenth regiment were rushed to the international bridges and other points along the Rio Grande. General Hugh Scott, commanding the United States troops, took personal charge. The cavalry was under command of General R. E. L. Michie.

General Villa is said to have 6,000 additional troops at Chihuahua, but will move his headquarters to Juarez, where the customs house has been turned into a military station.

It is said that a special train was let into the town during the night under the impression it contained Federal troops. Rebel troopers were within it. They detrained by twos to avert suspicion, and after gaining the points of vantage about town, began their attack. The Federals were routed.

The toll of dead and wounded in the battle will reach 150 killed and 300 wounded. The wounded will be brought here and cared for at the hotels by American soldiers.

SWIPED GRUB, IS CHARGE

Two Young Men Arrested on Complaint of Restaurant Man.

Charged with opening the refrigerator of Rocco Santori's restaurant on Peach street late last night and taking a large quantity of eatables, David Long and William Rose were arrested by Patrolman Bowers. The proprietor of the place appeared against them in police court this morning and later swore out a warrant for them before Squire Donegan.

Santori alleges that the men entered his place and while he was at the telephone opened the refrigerator, taking therefrom meats, vegetables and other articles worth about $10, some of which they ate but what they could not eat they threw into the street. Rose denied the charge in police court, but Long admitted that he was drunk and could not remember what he did.

The two men will be given a hearing by Squire Donegan tonight. In the meantime they are serving 48 hour sentences for being drunk.

He that is it may, Roland brought the 15 home with him.

Today he is looking for a huckster who sold him two pounds of country butter. Roland put the butter on the scales and found it tipped only a pound and 9 ounces.

SEEKS HIS MISSING WIFE HERE; SHE HAS BEEN GONE 2 WEEKS

West Virginia Man Tries to Trace Woman Who Disappeared.

LAST SEEN IN MORGANTOWN

Traced to That Place, but There the Trail Ends; Has Relatives Here; Relatives of Charles Snyder, Who Has Been Missing, Still Seek Him.

Hoping to find some trace of his wife, who mysteriously disappeared in Morgantown on October 31, J. W. Gribble of Pisgah, W. Va., near the Fayette county line, arriving in Connellsville today. Mr. Gribble was accompanied by E. P. O'Neal, who is assisting him in the attempt to find the missing woman. The disappearance was mysterious. On October 31 Mrs. Gribble, who is about 35 years old, started for Morgantown to make some purchases and have her teeth attended to. She has not been seen since.

Mr. Gribble stated that his wife reached Morgantown safely. That much he knows, but the trail ends. He could not find that she had made any purchases, or that she had visited a dentist. At home are three boys, the oldest 16 and the youngest 5, who are keeping house while the father is away on his discouraging search.

Mrs. Gribble is related to the family of Thomas King and to others in Connellsville, but they were unable to give the husband any information. Mr. Gribble fears foul play. He is afraid that his wife has become the victim of unscrupulous persons in Morgantown, who have spirited her away.

The search will be continued. Aid of the police has been sought. Hospitals and undertaking establishments have been visited by Gribble and O'Neal but not a single clue has yet been found.

Adam Snyder of Perryopolis was in town early this morning still searching for his missing brother, Charles B. Snyder, who disappeared about two months ago. He had heard that the initials C. B. S. were sewed on the inside of the overcoat of the man run down at the Western Maryland passenger station on the West Side Thursday night, and thought that the victim might be his brother. However, after being permitted to see the injured man at the Cottage State Hospital he declared that he was not the man.

Charles Snyder left home to go to Pittsburg, late in September. He drew his savings out of a bank in that city and then disappeared completely. He is mentally unbalanced from worrying about a carpenter's strike at Dunbar, several months ago, hence the family are especially anxious to locate him.

A rumor that a half-clothed man was wandering in the mountains at Chalk Hill took Adam Snyder, the brother, on another wild-goose chase some weeks ago, thinking that this might be the missing brother, but all clues proved vain and the relatives are gradually giving up hope of finding him.

The entrances are securely boarded up but if the red lights were not there a driver might plunge into them and suffer injury to his horses or automobile.

ONLY WOMAN STATE SENATOR IN AMERICA MAY GO TO CONGRESS.

"Are we to have a congress woman to sit in council with the congressmen at Washington some time in the near future?" is the question that is now being asked. And this because one woman has already been urged to become a candidate from the Denver district. She is Mrs. Helen Ring Robinson, known far and wide as the only woman state senator in America. It was just a year ago this month that Mrs. Robinson who had long been an indefatigable worker for the welfare of women in her city and state, was elected to a four year term in the Colorado state senate.

PRELIMINARY HEARING IN THE BULECK MURDER CASE

Lee Scott and Two Witnesses Held for Trial at December Term of Court.

Special to The Courier.

UNIONTOWN, Nov. 15.—A preliminary hearing was given Lee Scott, the negro accused of killing Al Buleck at Greene Junction on the afternoon of October 29, before Squire John Boyle, at 11 o'clock this morning.

As is customary in capital offenses, only the Commonwealth's side was heard and Steve Burke was the only witness. Burke testified that he had been sleeping in the camp car when Scott and Buleck entered. He said he did not see the stabbing, but on the strength of his testimony that Scott threatened to kill his companion unless he returned money loaned to him and the amount of his fine in Connellsville police court the day before.

Scott pleaded to be allowed to say a word in his own behalf but his plea was refused by the justice who made out warrants for him on a charge of murder and for Burke and Tom Green as absconding witness. The case will be submitted to the grand jury in December.

THIRD WARD BLAMED

Racket Made by Fire Whistle Traced to That Section.

Chief of the Fire Department Haddock and City Electrician A. J. Buttermore have not located the grounded wire in the fire alarm system that caused the whistle to go on a jag on Friday morning but they have traced it into the Third ward. Both were at work today, but the Third ward is such a big one that they are up against a task of some magnitude, unless they run across the break by accident.

The trouble has been diagnosed as a grounded wire and it has resulted in the current being diverted from the system, considerably impairing its usefulness in the district where the difficulty lies.

P. J. TORMAY GOES ON PENSION LIST; QUITS TOMORROW

Veteran Employe of the Frick Coke Company to Retire.

AT TROTTER FOR 29 YEARS

Entered Service of Company at Old Anchor Plant 35 Years Ago Last July; Superintendent at Trotter Plant 17 Years; Boyd Succeeds Him.

Patrick J. Tormay, superintendent of the Trotter plant of the H. C. Frick Coke Company and one of the best known men in the employ of the big corporation, will go on the pension list tomorrow. Today is his last as superintendent at the Trotter plant, where he has been in command for the past 17 years.

Mr. Tormay has been in the employ of the H. C. Frick Coke Company for more than 35 years, and is one of its most efficient superintendents. Under his direction, Trotter has been made a model plant, in spite of the fact that it was laid out at a time when coal mining in the region was in its infancy.

Mr. Tormay entered the employ of the company 25 years ago last July, when he was made yard boss at the old Anchor plant at Dunbar. He later went to Valley works in the same capacity, and in 1884 took charge of the yards at Trotter. He continued as yard boss there until 1896, when he was appointed superintendent, a position he has held ever since.

Mr. Tormay was not only an efficient sperintendent, but he enjoyed the friendship and esteem of his employes, every one of whom will regret to see him retire. The retirement, however, was earned by the years of faithful service to the company by which he is employed. Soon after the first of the year Mr. Tormay will move to Connellsville with his family and they will make their future home here.

Benton Boyd, who has been superintendent of the Dorothy plant of the H. C. Frick Coke Company, will succeed Mr. Tormay, taking charge of the Trotter plant tomorrow.

Another Trotter employe expected to go on the pension list in the near future is Eugene O'Donovan, who has been bookkeeper there for years. Mr. O'Donovan lives on the West Side and was recently elected alderman of the Seventh ward.

PLENTY OF ROAD MONEY.

Young Says Five Millions a Year Is Available.

HARRISBURG, Nov. 15.—Robert K. Young, state treasurer and former auditor general, today declared that notwithstanding the defeat of the $50,000,000 road bond amendment, $5,000,000 is available for the use annually in road construction if the Legislature sees fit to appropriate it. He said also:

"This can be done by increasing the appropriations last made to the highway department by adding thereto the appropriations made by the Legislature of this year to objects having no just claim upon the state's bounty, the withholding of which would not only be an improvement in economies but of public morals."

SURE WAY TO CURE RHEUMATISM

Cure Stiff, Sore Joints and Muscles, Makes Pains and Backache Promptly Vanish.

"Most all rheumatism is due to one cause—weak kidneys" says a noted authority. The kidneys become clogged up, get sluggish and filter or strain out only a part of the poisonous waste matter and uric acid, all the rest remains in the blood and circulates through the system, where it lodges in the joints and muscles, and causes all the trouble.

The only way to overcome this, is to make your kidneys work properly. You can easily and surely do this by taking a little Croxone, which never fails to act promptly.

Croxone not only cleans out the clogged up kidneys strengthens them and makes them active, but it neutralizes and dissolves the poisonous waste substances, and uric acid, that scratch and irritate and cause rheumatism, so the kidneys can filter it from the blood and drive it out of the system.

Croxone is believed to be the most remarkable preparation ever known for the prompt relief and cure of rheumatism, kidney troubles and bladder disorders. It is entirely different from other remedies. It is so prepared that it is practically impossible to take without results. Relief follows the first few doses, and you will be surprised how quickly stiff, sore, swollen joints, and muscles, rheumatic pains, and all such misery ends.

An original package of Croxone costs but a trifle, and every druggist recommends and sells it on a positive money-back guarantee. Three doses a day, for a few days, is often all that is ever needed to overcome the worst backache or most annoying urinary disorders.—Adv.

WOMAN SICK FOURTEEN YEARS

Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Elkhart, Ind.:—"I suffered for fourteen years from organic inflammation, female weakness, pain and irregularities. The pains in my sides were increased by walking or standing on my feet and I had such awful bearing down feelings, was depressed in spirits and became thin and pale with dull, heavy eyes. I had six doctors from whom I received only temporary relief. I decided to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial and also the Sanative Wash. I have now used the remedies for four months and cannot express my thanks for what they have done for me.

"If these lines will be of any benefit you have my permission to publish them."—Mrs. SADIE WILLIAMS, 455 James Street, Elkhart, Indiana.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record of being the most successful remedy for female ills we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., seem to prove this fact.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

Yale's line has been strengthened by shifting several men, and Captain Ketcham, best known as a center man, will play at guard. The members of the Yale team in the accompanying photo according to number are as follows: 1, Carter; 2, Warren; 3, Cooney; 4, Knowles; 5, Wilson; 6, Captain Ketcham; 7, Pumpelly; 8, Robinson; 9, Ainsworth; 10, Talbot; 11, Avery.

CONSUMPTION CAN BE PREVENTED

Also Curable in Early Stages. Time-Tested Treatment Proves Successful

It is a scientifically proved fact that consumption is absolutely preventable and, in early stages, is actually curable. Wherever consumption is as all prevalent, the germs circulate freely and are breathed in by all. Those with weak lungs or who catch cold easily are most subject to the ravages of the consumption germ. Emulsions of cod-liver oil and similar substances have proved too ineffective to fight this dread disease, but one has demonstrated the value of a unique remedy that is almost invariably successful.

The remarkable record of Bear's Emulsion entitles it to front rank as a preventive and cure for consumption. This remedy eases the pain, reduces coughing, stops expectoration of toxins in the entire system. As thousands of people have used it and benefited by such use, it may honestly be claimed that it has in reality stood the test of time, and the proprietor of this remedy, Dr. John D. Bear, Doctor of Pharmacy of Elkton, Va., has received hundreds of voluntary letters from people many of whom say they owe their very lives to the wonderful upbuilding and curative properties of this product.

Of special interest then, is the news that our local druggists now carry this preparation in stock and that the price is low enough to be within the reach of anyone—$1.00 the bottle or six bottles for $5.00. The proprietor freely guarantees this product and further points out that it is pure, harmless and will not deteriorate or become rancid. One bottle is usually sufficient to establish its merits, and relief is obtained after the first day's use.

RASH OF PIMPLES ALL OVER BODY

Red and Inflamed. When Scratched, Spread. Kept Awake at Night. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

640 Wunder St., Reading, Pa. —"I had sores like eczema breaking out on me continually for over a year. One day I broke out all over my body with a rash of pimples. The pimples were little red ones and they were inflamed and when I scratched them they would spread all over my body. They itched so it kept me awake at night scratching myself to death.

"I tried different kinds of salve and ——, but they didn't do any good until the doctor recommended Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I took a bath with Cuticura Soap and covered my self well with the Cuticura Ointment and I slept well all night and had no itching. I only used a half of a box of Cuticura Ointment and the Cuticura Soap and I was cured." (Signed) Charles F. Swavely, May 9, 1913.

Not only are Cuticura Soap and Ointment most valuable in the treatment of rashes, eczemas and other distressing eruptions of skin and scalp, but they are also most effective in the treatment of pimples, blackheads, red, rough skins, itching, scaly scalps, dandruff, dry, thin and falling hair, chapped hands and shapeless nails. A single cake of Cuticura Soap (25c.) and box of Cuticura Ointment (50c.) are often sufficient. Sold by druggists and dealers throughout the world. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. book on the skin and hair. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

SPENCER SENTENCED TO DIE.

Jury Finds Slayer of Dancing Teacher Guilty of Murder.

CHICAGO, Nov. 15.—Henry Spencer, confessed slayer of Mrs. Mildred Allison Rexroat, a dancing teacher, was last night found guilty of murder by a jury at Wheaton, a suburb. The death penalty was fixed by the jury, which returned a verdict after little more than two hours deliberation.

Spencer was arrested October 5, accused of having lured Mrs. Rexroat to Wayne, Ill., and placing her body on the railroad track after he had shot here to death. Immediately after his arrest, Spencer began a wholesale confession, in which he declared he had murdered 29 persons, all for the purpose of robbery.

HAS HOUR ENDS.

Republican newspapers heartily commend Justice Mestrezat's Constitutional policy as recently expounded by him in a public address. Editor Robert W. Herbert refers to it in the Greensburg Tribune as follows:

"S. Leslie Mestrezat, a justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, although a comparatively young man, a Democrat and always well abreast of the times, is one of those good old-fashioned souls who believes that all the ills of the people are not to be cured by tampering and tinkering with our Constitution.

"Justice Mestrezat is of and by the people, and he is for the people. He is one of them. He is a native of Greene county. He spent his boyhood on a Greene county farm, and he accumulated an immense store of good, hard, horse sense while plodding over the hills of his own little Greene.

"Justice Mestrezat contends, and his contention should be illuminating to those who are prone to false reasoning, that when honestly and effectively administered the powers now enjoyed by the government are sufficient and adequate to guarantee every citizen in this country his legitimate rights. No more and no less."

The Democratic program in Fayette county is to nominate Justice Mestrezat for Governor as a Progressive Democrat and invite the Flinn machine to lead the Progressives in the Democratic procession.

But Justice Mestrezat's Constitutional declaration is not Progressive; it is Conservative. It voices the views of another great Pennsylvania jurist and statesman who calls Fayette county his home, namely, Philander Chase Knox.

Justice Mestrezat spelled a good politician when he went on the Supreme Bench, but he has not forgotten the fine points of the game. He concluded his remarks with a fierce denunciation of Big Business and Special Privilege, which will doubtless be used to prove to the Washington party faction that one can be a Democrat and a Progressive.

Justice Mestrezat seems to have a firm grasp on both ends of the string.

DRY ROT?

The Chamber of Commerce meeting was not a success, and it is intimated that if a supper had been offered as an inducement the attendance would have been liberal. The Chamber of Commerce is not a lunch club. In times past there was possibly too much disposition to make it so.

The business of the Chamber of Commerce, if its officers attend strictly to their business, is the business of every mercantile and property interest in Connellsville; and these, especially the larger interests, should be glad to attend the meetings of the Chamber of Commerce and help the officers with their work of helping the town; in fact, they should be the Chamber of Commerce. The business of city promotion is the business of the left of capital, not the loose change.

It is regrettable that so little interest was taken in the meeting this week. It indicates that the spirit of progress in Connellsville is inert. Enterprise seems to be asleep at the switch. It is time to wake up. We are about to become Fayette County's First City. We should measure up to the standard of that dignity.

Connellsville has never lacked enterprise before. Is it possible that we are suffering from the dry rot?

DON'T KNOW THE CHILD.

There have been some questions raised as to the proper interpretation of portions of the Clark third class city bill under which Connellsville will soon set up a new government, but they do not seem to be difficult of reasonable and satisfactory construction. There is, in fact, nothing mystifying to Mr. Clark, however much there may be mischievous and impracticable in it. The Courier did not hesitate to express the opinion that the Clark act was a bad law, but so far as we are concerned it shall have every chance in the world to demonstrate its good points.

In the meantime, however, it is amusing to note that the framers of the Clark act have called a meeting of representatives of third class cities to convene in Harrisburg to discuss this law apparently with a view to coming to an agreement as to just what it means. The lawyers are already disagreeing about its interpretation and effects. Will they agree any better after they have corralled together?

It is certainly strange that those wise lawmakers do not know their own child.

The exodus of foreigners for a visit to their homes in European countries is only another symptom of the declining coke trade. The foreign laborer is something of a coke region business barometer. He knows when to go and when to return. He usually goes under a Democratic administration.

Football weather has been about as bad as it could be.

The officials of the Bull Moose organ in "Uniontown" county to print Bill Crow black and Mr. Crow white are more amusing than entertaining.

The fire whistle officially on a toot, but this time it is accused of having a joyful toot.

The Mud Island sucker season is at hand. This is admittedly a fish tale.

The Western Maryland is going to get some of that Cumberland eloping business by running a local train to suit the suitors.

The Mexican situation continues stormy and unsettled.

The Connellsville region will make the first coke shipment to the Panama Canal Zone. It will be hand-picked, but it will not be wrapped in tinfoil.

Insidious diphtheria still lurks around in the vicinity. The Chief of Police should put on a sub now and then and decorate his manly chest with the honorable badge of the Health Officer.

The wide-open coke market yawns cavernously enough to swallow those who are playing on the brink.

FOOTBALL.

By GEORGE FITCH.

Author of "At Good Old Siwash."

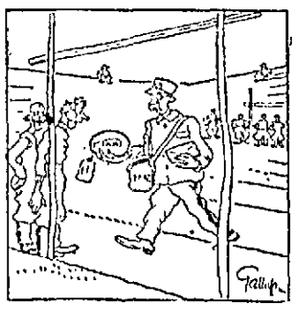
Football, which becomes epidemic in September of each year, is a perpetual contest between the rules committee and the coroner, with the former at present several laps in the lead.

Football is a concerted endeavor on the part of eleven impetuous young men to tunnel through eleven other stubborn and strong-minded youths, with the object of carrying a $3.00 leather ball to a goal line not far away. The ball could be sent by parcels post or aeroplane in much less time and at far less expense, but this would not be sport. Sport consists of doing an easy thing in the most difficult manner possible—which is why golfers play their game with the aid of a caddy instead of a messenger boy.

When eleven husky young men try to go through a place occupied by eleven other husky young men something has to give way. In the case of football it is usually a collar bone, though the tibia and fibula are also great sufferers. When football had progressed to a perfection which necessitated the delaying of the game after each play in order to piece the players together, the census authorities interfered and the rules committee came to the rescue.

Football in its new denatured form is played by a referee of the revised rules, neatly bound in 11 volumes, at $1 per volume or $3 for full leather. The new game is as interesting as parchesi. The player takes the ball and rams it through five men for four yards. The officials then bring it back ten yards on account of rule 22, series b. Another player then carries it forward 35 yards. The officials take it back 40 yards and give it to the opposition. The opposition then trips on its own feet, falls down in a heap, loses the ball, busts a garter and is awarded 25 yards by rule 678, ring twice. The opposition then kicks goal, for which it loses the ball and ten yards, and receives a warning.

This so heartens the other side that it fumbles the ball ten yards back of its own line and is given twenty yards by the referee on the ground that the left guard tickled an opponent while brushing past him. The attacking side now makes ten yards more by sitting on the ball and yelling for help, and ten yards when the center passes the ball over the fullback's head. Victory is now in sight, but unfortunately the attacking halfback now makes a 70-yard run and touchdown. For this his side loses the ball and 7 points,

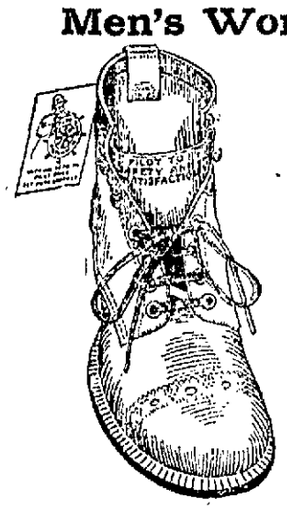


"The ball could be sent by parcels post in much less time, and far less expense, but this would be sport."

the quarterback is ejected from the field, the business manager is conditioned in history B and the game is declared a draw on points.

Football is still inspiring to watch and is now a safe game, except as regards the officials, who must be men of great endurance and education. Too much time is now taken out to allow the umpire to keep his books and recover his wind, and it has been suggested that the game can be speeded up by allowing the officials to play while the players, who are in better physical condition any way, do their work.

Men's Working Shoes



MEN, WE WANT YOU to see our Work Shoes—the complete line. When passing by our windows, just stop and look them over. Elk-Skin leather has gotten to be very popular with the young men. They are heavy—two and sometimes three soles thick—cut very soft, and pliable upper stocks, that any one can wear them and their feet will feel comfortable. Heretofore the workingman has had to wear too stiff a shoe if he got a heavy pair, but not so today. Ask to see our elkskin water-proofs and heavy chrome calf—both in high and regular heights—$2.50, $3.00, $3.50, $4.00, $4.50 to $6.00.

A HOME MISSION WEEK AT BAPTIST CHURCH TO OPEN

The Call of the Hour Will Be the Pastor's Topic Tomorrow.

CONTRACTOR DICK OBJECTING

Created Sensation in Altoona by Going After Engineer in Awarding of Sewer Work; Case of Appendicitis; Other Notes of News.

SCOTTDALE, Nov. 15.—Home Mission week will be observed at the First Baptist Church next week opening tomorrow. Rev. W. G. Russell, pastor, will speak on "The Call of the Hour," Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, and at 7.30 that evening the topic will be "The Discipline of Delay." On Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock the young ladies will give an entertainment entitled "Just Plain Peter," which will be a presentation in concrete form of the life of children of the tenements. On Wednesday evening Pastor Russell will give an illustrated travelogue on "The Man From Italy." This lecture will visually take the hearers to Holland, Germany, Switzerland, Venice, Rome, and give a glimpse of the steerage passengers and their distribution in the cities. Some 80 beautifully colored slides will be used. Admission free, and an offering will be received.

RALLY DAY.

A Sunday school rally will be held at the Iverson United Brethren Sunday school tomorrow, November 16, beginning at 10 o'clock in the morning. Recitations, addresses and singing wil form the program, and all are invited to attend this service.

CHECKS TO AWARD.

John I. Dick, a local contractor, has addressed a warm communication to the select council of Altoona, in which he charged that City Engineer Frank Engstrom with beating him out of the contract for the construction of the big out-fall sewer, asserting that Mr. Engstrom used methods that were irregular. Mr. Dick claimed that the system employed in letting the contract to a higher bidder and then framing up excuses will not be tolerated and promises to make trouble for those concerned. The charges made a sensation in Altoona and council will investigate.

STORK LEADS AGAIN.

AT HOSPITAL.

Mrs. Edith R. Hodges, wife of George H. Hodges, of Fairchance, was operated on at the Mount Pleasant Hospital on Friday, for appendicitis. The patient is a daughter of Mr and Mrs. Josiah Reynolds of Scottdale.

IS IMPROVING.

Reports are that the condition of William H. Slaighter of Scottdale, who was operated on for appendicitis at the Mount Pleasant Hospital on Sunday is slowly improving. Miss Margaret Sterbutzel, another patient in the hospital for appendicitis, is recovering so well that her parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. Sterbutzel expect to be able to bring her to her home in Dawson in a few days.

GOODMAN SUFFERS BIG LOSS

Defective Roof Caused Water to Run Through Store in Torrents.

One of the heaviest losers in Connellsville through the big snow storm the first of the week, was S. M. Goodman, the North Pittsburg street clothier and furnisher. A defective roof over the one-story portion of the rear of his store proved too frail to withstand the big load of snow and water which consequently flooded a big portion of the store. The greatest damage resulted in the clothing department which is located in the rear of the building and this morning after taking stock, Mr. Goodman said the damage would reach several thousand dollars.

While the clothing is not damaged to such an extent that it is useless, hundreds of suits must be sold at a big sacrifice. The damage is not alone confined to the clothing department. Hundreds of dollars worth of underwear and furnishings have been more or less damaged.

EARLY PLANTS OF COKE REGION WILL SOON BE A MEMORY

Coal Fast Being Worked Out Where First Ovens Were Built.

SOME OF THEM ABANDONED NOW

Rainey is Closed Down, and It Was There that "Little Jim" Cochran Made the First Coke Many Years Ago; Limited Life for Other Mines.

The day of several of the region's early coke plants is on the wane. Some of them have already been abandoned and there is only limited life for others. The section about Dawson was at one time the busiest spot in the coke region. The first coke was made there, and for many years it was the center of activity. Today the older mines are rapidly becoming exhausted. A few have been abandoned altogether, and others will meet a like fate in the near future.

W. J. Rainey has within a short time abandoned the Rainey plant at Raineytown, on the west side of the Youghiogheny river below Dawson. The Rainey plant is located on the original site of the old Fayette plant, one of the first coking plants in the Connellsville region. It was owned and operated by "Little Jim" Cochran, who before his death was one of the leading operators of the region. The Cochran interests, which include the Washington plant, are still a prominent factor in Connellsville coke.

Long before the old Fayette plant was constructed coking operations were conducted on a small scale on its site. Here the Connellsville coke business was born. The late Judge Provance McCormick and others put up two ovens and during a winter's season of toil accumulated two boatloads of coke, which they ran down to Cincinnati on the spring rise and tried to sell to foundrymen for fuel. The new fuel went slowly and the pioneers of the coke business came home in disgust. The Cochran boys ran the ovens the next winter and their cargo found eager buyers. The value of Connellsville coke as a foundry fuel had been established. The old Fayette works was a later development of the Cochran interests. It was built immediately after the completion of the Pittsburg & Connellsville railroad. By this time Connellsville coke had established a reputation as a furnace fuel and its use in the Pittsburg furnaces began.

The old Fayette works will live long in the memory of Dawson residents. F. E. Uglovee, who now conducts a general store at Vanderbilt; John Lint, A. N. Lint, George Beatty, Newton Colbert, G. M. Strickler and many other men, now prominent in that section, worked at the old Fayette plant.

The Rainey interests have also blown out 50 ovens at the Paul mine, Vanderbilt, and this is said to mark the beginning of the end to that operation. The coal at the Rainey and Fort Hill mines is nearly exhausted, and Paul has but a few more years to run.

The Nellie mine of Brown & Cochran has a few more years of life left and then it will be abandoned. Clarissa has already passed into history. Five years ago the coal under the Rankin, Harper and Henderson farms was exhausted. It was from this tract that Clarissa was operated. The Harper farm is still owned by the Cochrans. Espy Lynn owns the Rankin farm, and W. H. Moore the Henderson farm.

The coal now being mined for Nellie ovens was originally owned by J. C. Core, deceased, A. C. Sherrard and several others in that vicinity. The Paul and Fort Hill mines were supplied from coal from the estates of Colonel A. J. Hill, now dead, David Hill, the late John Hair, the Leightys, Collins' and several others. The A. J. Hill farm is now owned by Poor Director George M. Strickler, while the Rainey interests own the Hair and Leighty farms.

Although losing prestige as a coke producing center, the Dawson-Vanderbilt-Dickerson Run residents are not discouraged. The Pittsburg & Lake Erie-Western Maryland operations assure the prosperity of that community for years to come. The yards at Dickerson Run, together with shops and other railroad activities, will ultimately give employment to several thousand men, and it is expected that future pays of the railroad forces will equal those of the neighborhood in the palmy days of the coking industry.

PIG IRON OUTPUT SAGS; 14 STACKS IS MONTH'S LOSS

Total in Operation on Last of October Smallest Since June, 1912.

SMALL GAIN OVER SEPTEMBER

Loss in Active Stacks Partly Due to Slackening Activities of the Non-Merchant Furnaces; Both Merchant and Non-Merchant Gain on September.

A net loss of 14 in active blast furnaces is shown in comparing the last days of October and September, making the total of stacks in blast the smallest since June, 1912. The production of coke and anthracite pig iron showed a small gain last month over September, due to the longer month, but the decline in furnace activities is reflected by the drop in average daily output, says the Iron Trade Review.

The pig iron production last month was 2,539,919 tons, compared with 2,494,698 tons in September, a gain of 45,821 tons. The output in October of last year was 2,683,615 tons.

In average daily output, the figures for October and September of this year are 81,933 and 83,137 tons, respectively, a decline last month of 1,204 tons. The average production in October, 1912, was 86,569 tons.

The loss in average production was due to the decline in the production of non-merchant iron, as the merchant furnaces made a small gain in both total and average output in October.

The steel works or non-merchant furnaces produced 1,853,410 tons in October and 1,828,882 tons in September, a gain of 24,528 tons. In average production the figures for the two months are 59,787 and 60,963 tons respectively, a loss last month of 1,176 tons.

The production of Merchant iron in October was 664,036 tons against 638,131 tons in September, a gain of 25,902 tons. The average output in October was 21,421 tons compared with 21,271 tons in September, a gain of 150 tons.

The loss in active stacks is also due to the slackening activities of the non-merchant furnaces, 17 being blown out and two relighted, a net loss of 15. Six merchant furnaces were blown in and five put out, a net gain of one. In all, eight stacks were blown in and 22 blown out.

The number of active stacks on October 31 was 241, compared with 248 on September 30 and 280 on October 31, 1912.

The production of ferro in October was 16,314 tons, compared with 15,463 tons in September, a gain of 851 tons. The October output of spiegel was 6,159 tons against 11,619 tons in September, a loss of 5,460 tons.

EXAMINES COAL FIELD

Geological Survey Expert Tells of Montana Deposit.

Among the many areas of coal land examined recently by the United States Geological Survey in connection with its land classification work, is the Little Sheep Mountain field in Montana, described by G. S. Rogers in Bulletin 531-F, just published by the Survey. The area is about 60 miles from Terry and contains about 1,440 square miles. The Little Sheep Mountain field, in common with all the others in this vicinity, was examined with a view to the classification of the land and the valuation of that part underlain by coal or lignite. The coals of this area seem to be on the boundary line between lignite and sub-bituminous coal.

Under present economic conditions it is held that no bed of this grade of coal thinner than 30 inches is workable, although in the examination of this field all beds down to 24 inches were mapped, and many thinner ones were examined. From the data thus gathered, only beds 30 inches or more in thickness being taken into account, the total quantity of coal in the Fort Union coals of the Little Sheep Mountain field is estimated to be 2,218,349,080 tons; if all beds of a thickness greater than 14 inches are counted the total is 2,560,790,560 tons.

A copy of the bulletin may be obtained free on application to the Director of the Geological Survey, Washington, D. C.

OCTOBER CAR ORDERS

Largest of any Month Since Last May, 95,000 More Cars This Year.

Confirmed orders for cars placed with builders in October show the largest total of any month since May. According to carefully compiled records, verified at originial sources, the aggregate orders taken by builders and reported during the month past reached about 7,500 cars, compared with about 2,000 in September and about the equal number in August.

Some estimates of the extent of car buying in October place the total at a considerably higher figure, but it develops that some of the contracts reported in the month are repetitions of awards made some time prior and revived at this time for various reasons. The 7,500 cars ascribed to the month of October do not include those cars for which the railroads made arrangements to build in their own shops, of which there were several thousand, including 1,000 for the Norfolk & Western, nor do they embrace underframes paced.

The total number of cars placed with builders in the calendar year up to November 1 is now about 95,500.

"Who said there was anything against you, Joe?" Burke rejoined, in a voice that was genially chiding.

"What's the matter with you today, Joe? You seem nervous." Still, the official kept on with his writing.

"No, I ain't nervous," Garson cried, with a feverish effort to appear calm. "Why, what makes you think that? But this ain't exactly the place you'd pick out as a pleasant one to spend the morning." He was silent for a little, trying with all his strength to regain his self control, but with small success.

Burke believed that his opportunity was come. His hand slipped into the pocket where was the pistol, and clutched it. He stared at Garson fiercely, and spoke with a rush of the words:

"Why did you kill Eddie Griggs?"

"I didn't kill him!" The reply was quick enough, but it came weakly. Again, Garson was forced to wet his lips with a dry tongue, and to swallow painfully. "I tell you, I didn't kill him!" he repeated at last, with more force.

"You killed him last night—with this!" Burke cried, viciously. On the instant, the pistol leaped into view, pointed straight at Garson. "Why?" the inspector shouted. "Come on, now! Why?"

"I didn't. I tell you!" Garson was growing stronger, since at last the crisis was upon him. He got to his feet with lithe swiftness of movement and sprang close to the desk. He bent his head forward challengingly, to meet the glare of his accuser's eyes.

There passed many seconds, while the two men battled in silence, will warring against will. In the end it was the murderer who triumphed.

Suddenly, Burke dropped the pistol into his pocket, and lolled back in his chair. His gaze fell away from the man confronting him. In the same instant, the rigidity of Garson's form relaxed, and he straightened slowly.

"Oh, well," Burke exclaimed amiably, "I didn't really think you did, but I wasn't sure, so I had to take a chance. You understand, don't you, Joe?"

"Sure, I understand," Garson replied, with an amiability equal to the inspector's own.

Burke pressed the buzzer as the agreed signal to Cassidy. "Where did you say Mary Turner was last night?"

At the question, all Garson's fears for the woman rushed back on him with appalling force.

"I don't know where she was," he exclaimed doubtfully. He realized his blunder even as the words left his lips, and sought to correct it as best he might. "Why, yes, I do, too," he went on, as if assailed by sudden memory. "I dropped into her place kind of late, and they said she'd gone to bed—headache, I guess. Yes, she was home, of course. She didn't go out of the house all night." His insistence on the point was of itself suspicious, but eagerness to protect her dulled his wits.

"Know anything about Gilder?" Burke demanded.

"Not a thing," was the earnest answer.

The inner door opened, and Mary Turner entered the office. Garson with difficulty suppressed the cry of distress that rose to his lips. For a few moments the silence was unbroken. Then presently Burke by a gesture directed the girl to advance toward the center of the room. As she obeyed he himself went a little toward the door, and when it opened again and Dick Gilder appeared he interposed to check the young man's rush forward as his gaze fell on his bride, who stood regarding him with sad eyes.

Then, while still that curious, dynamic silence endured, Cassidy came briskly into the office.

"Say, chief," the detective said rapidly, "they've squealed."

"Squealed, eh? Do they tell the same story?" And then when the detective had answered in the affirmative he went on speaking in tones ponderous with self complacency.

"I was right, then, after all—right all the time. Good enough." Of a sudden his voice boomed sonorously. "Mary Turner, I want you for the murder of"—

Garson's rush halted the sentence. He had leaped forward. His face was rigid. He broke on the inspector's words with a gesture of fury. His voice came in a hiss:

"That's a —— lie! I did it!"

CHAPTER XIX.

Anguish and Bliss.

GARSON shouted his confession without a second of reflection. But the result must have been the same had he taken years of thought. Between him and her as the victim of the law, there could be no hesitation for choice. The prime necessity was to save her, Mary, from the toils of the law that were closing around her. For himself, in the days to come, there would be a ghastly dread, but there would never be regret over the cost of saving her. He had saved her from the waters—he would save her until the end, as far as the power in him might lie.

The suddenness of it all held Mary voiceless for long seconds. She was frozen with horror of the event. When, at last, words came, they were a frantic prayer of protest.

"No, Joe! No! Don't talk—don't talk!"

"Joe has talked," Burke said, significantly.

"He did it to protect me," she stated, earnestly.

The inspector disdained such futile argument. As the doorman appeared in answer to the buzzer, he directed that the stenographer be summoned at once.

"We'll have the confession in due form," he remarked, gazing pleasedly on the three before him.

"He's not going to confess," Mary insisted, with spirit.

But Burke disregarded her completely, and spoke mechanically to Garson the formal warning required by the law.

"You are hereby cautioned that anything you say may be used against you." Then, as the stenographer entered, he went on with lively interest. "Now, Joe!"

Yet once again, Mary protested, a little wildly.

"Don't speak, Joe! Don't say a word till we can get a lawyer for you!"

The man met her pleading eyes steadily, and shook his head in refusal.

"It's no use, my girl," Burke broke in harshly. "I told you I'd get you. I'm going to try you and Garson, and the whole gang for murder—yes, every one of you. And you, Gilder," he continued, lowering on the young man who had defied him so obstinately, "you'll go to the house of detention as a material witness." He turned his gaze to Garson again, and spoke authoritatively: "Come on now, Joe!"

Garson went a step toward the desk and spoke decisively.

"If I come through, you'll let her go—and him?" he added as an afterthought, with a nod toward Dick Gilder.

"We'll get the best lawyers in the country," Mary persisted desperately. "We'll save you, Joe—we'll save you!"

Garson regarded the distraught girl with wistful eyes. But there was no trace of yielding in his voice as he replied, though he spoke very sorrowfully.

"No, you can't help me," he said simply. "My time has come, Mary. And I can save you a lot of trouble."

"He's right there," Burke ejaculated. "We've got him cold. So, what's the use of dragging you two into it?"

"Then they go clear?" Garson exclaimed, eagerly. "They ain't even to be called as witnesses?"

"You're on!" Burke agreed.

"Then, here goes!" Garson cried, and he looked expectantly toward the stenographer.

"My name is Joe Garson."

"Alias?" Burke suggested.

"Alias nothing!" came the sharp retort. "Garson's my monaker. I shot English Eddie, because he was a skunk and a stool pigeon, and he got just what was coming to him." Vituperation beyond the mere words beat in his voice now.

"Now, now!" Burke objected, severely. "We can't take a confession like that."

Garson shook his head—spoke with fiercer hatred.

"Because he was a skunk and a stool pigeon," he repeated. "Have you got it?" And then, as the stenographer nodded assent, he went on, less violently. "I croaked him just as he was going to call the bulls with a police whistle. I used a gun with smokeless powder. It had a Maxim silencer on it, so that it didn't make any noise."

Garson paused, and the set despair of his features lightened a little. Into his voice came a tone of exultation indescribably ghastly. It was born of the eternal egotism of the criminal, fattening vanity in glorying over his ingenuity for evil. He stared at Burke with a quizzical grin crooking his lips.

"Say," he exclaimed, "I'll bet it's the first time a guy was ever croaked with one of them things! Ain't it?"

The inspector nodded affirmation.

"Some class to that, eh?" Garson demanded, still with that gruesome air of boasting. "I got the gun and the Maxim silencer thing off a fence in Boston," he explained. "Say, that thing cost me $60, and it's worth every cent of the money. Why, they'll remember me as the first to spring one of them things, won't they?"

"They sure will, Joe!" the inspector conceded.

"Nobody knew I had it," Garson continued, dropping his braggart manner abruptly.

At the words, Mary started, and her lips moved as if she were about to speak.

"Nobody knew I had it—nobody in the world," he declared. "And nobody had anything to do with the killing but me."

"Was there any bad feeling between you and Eddie Griggs?"

"Never till that very minute. Then I learned the truth about what he'd framed up with you." The speaker's voice reverted to its former fierceness in recollection of the treachery of one whom he had trusted.

"He was a stool pigeon, and I hated him! That's all, and it's enough. And it's all true, so help me God!"

The inspector nodded dismissal to the stenographer, with an air of relief.

"That's all, Williams," he said heavily. "He'll sign it as soon as you've transcribed the notes."

Then as the stenographer left the room Burke turned his gaze on the woman, who stood there in a posture of complete dejection, her white, anguished face downcast. There was triumph in the inspector's voice as he addressed her, for his professional pride was full fed by this victory over his foes.

"Young woman," Burke said briskly, "it's just like I told you. You can't beat the law. Garson thought he could—and now"— He broke off, with a wave of his hand toward the man who had just sentenced himself to death in the electric chair.

"That's right," Garson agreed, with somber intensity. His eyes were grown clouded again now, and his voice dragged leaden. "That's right, Mary," he repeated dully, after a little pause. "You can't beat the law!" He hesitated a little, then went on, with a certain curious embarrassment. "And this same old law says a woman must stick to her man."

The girl's eyes met his with passionate sorrow in their misty deeps. Garson gave a significant glance toward Dick Gilder, then his gaze returned to her. There was a smoldering despair in that look. There were, as well, an entreaty and a command.

"So," he went on, "you must go along with him, Mary. Won't you? It's the best thing to do."

The girl could not answer. There was a clutch on her throat just then, which would not relax at the call of her will.

Of a sudden, an inspiration came to him, a means to snap the tension, to create a diversion wholly efficacious. He would turn to his boasting again, would call upon his vanity, which he knew well as his chief foible, and make it serve as the foil against his love.

"You want to cut out worrying about me," he counseled, bravely. "Why, I ain't worrying any, myself—not a little bit! You see, it's something new I've pulled off. Nobody ever put over anything like it before."

He faced Burke with a grin of gloating again.

"I'll bet there'll be a lot of stuff in the newspapers about this, and my picture, too, in most of 'em! What?"

The man's manner imposed on Burke, though Mary felt the torment that his vainglorying was meant to mask.

"Say," Garson continued to the inspector, "if the reporters want any pictures of me could I have some new ones taken? The one you've got of me in the gallery is over ten years old. I've taken off my beard since then. Can I have a new one?"

"Sure you can, Joe. I'll send you up to the gallery right now."

"Immense!" Garson cried boisterously. He moved toward Dick Gilder, walking with a faint suggestion of swagger to cover the nervous tremor that had seized him.

"So long, young fellow," he exclaimed and held out his hand. "You've been on the square, and I guess you always will be."

Dick had no scruple in clasping that extended hand very warmly in his own.

"We'll do what we can for you," he said simply.

"That's all right," Garson replied, with such carelessness of manner as he could contrive. Then at last he turned to Mary. This parting must be bitter, and he braced himself with all the vigors of his will to combat the weakness that leaped from his soul.

As he came near the girl could hold herself in leash no longer. She threw herself on his breast. Her arms wreathed about his neck. Great sobs racked her.

"Oh, Joe, Joe!" The gasping cry was of utter despair.

Garson's trembling hand patted the girl's shoulder very softly, a caress of infinite tenderness.

"That's all right," he murmured huskily. "That's all right, Mary." There was a short silence, and then he went on speaking more firmly. "You know, he'll look after you."

He looked up over the girl's shoulder and beckoned with his head to Dick, who came forward.

"Take good care of her, won't you?"

He disengaged himself gently from the girl's embrace and set her within the arms of her husband, where she rested quietly, as if unable to fight longer against fate's decree.

"Well, so long!"

He dared not utter another word, but turned blindly, and went, stumbling a little, toward the doorman, who had appeared in answer to the inspector's call.

"To the gallery," Burke ordered curtly.

Garson went on without ever a glance back.

There was a long silence in the room after Garson's passing. It was broken at last by the inspector, who got up from his chair and advanced toward the husband and wife. In his hand he carried a sheet of paper, roughly scrawled. As he stopped before the two and cleared his throat, Mary withdrew herself from Dick's arms and regarded the official with brooding eyes from out her white face.

Burke extended the sheet of paper to the husband.

"There's a document," he said gruffly. "It's a letter from one Helen Morris, in which she sets forth the interesting fact that she pulled off a theft in the Emporium, for which your Mrs. Gilder here did time. You know, your father got your Mrs. Gilder sent up for three years for that same job—which she didn't do. That's why she had such a grudge against your father and against the law too!"

Burke chuckled, as the young man took the paper, wonderingly.

"I don't know that I blame her much for that grudge, when all's said and done. You give that document to your father. It sets her right. He's a just man according to his lights, your father. He'll do all he can to make things right for her, now he knows. Now, you two listen. I've got to go out a minute. When I get back, I don't want to find anybody here—not anybody! Do you get me?"

* * * * * * *

When the official was gone, the two stood staring mutely each at the other through long seconds. What she read in the man's eyes set the woman's heart to beating with a new delight. What he read in her eyes set the husband's pulses to bounding. He opened his arms in an appeal that was a command. Mary went forward slowly, without hesitation, in a bliss that forgot every sorrow for that blessed moment, and cast herself on his breast.

THE END.

QUEER FASHIONS.

The New Thick Neck Is the Latest.

HANDSOME TAILORED SUIT.

The new styles this season are truly fearfully and wonderfully made. At least, some of them are—the lamp shade skirt, dyed furs, landscape veils and the like. To these eccentricities has been added the collar that doesn't fit. With no pretense to fit, this neck arrangement is one of the ugliest of the freak fashions.

Aside from the thick wired collar, the costume pictured is one of the best looking tailleurs of the season. It is made of brocaded mohair in a charming shade of plum and is trimmed with a girdle of American Beauty satin. The little bolero coat reveals the girdle, and the sash ends fall gracefully from under a gathered peplum.

THINGS ALL OUGHT TO KNOW

As Christian Bible Students—The Satisfactory Proof of "Why God Permits Evil."

One of the questions which comes to nearly every thinking mind today is, "Why does God permit evil?" As we look about us in the world we observe that it is filled with sorrow and trouble, sickness and pain and every ill we could enumerate, and we cannot help wondering WHY GOD ALLOWS IT! We realize that He is almighty and that He could prevent it if He wished. We read in His Word that He is more willing to do for His children than are earthly parents for theirs and we know how much that means; yet oftentimes it seems that those who try to do and live right have the most trouble. This question is made very clear in a book entitled, "The Divine Plan of the Ages." Every statement is backed by Scripture, and shows that while God does not sanction evil HE HAS HAD A PURPOSE IN ALLOWING SIN AND DEATH TO REIGN THESE SIX THOUSAND YEARS. This and many other subjects of deep interest to all of God's people are discussed fully and in language easy of comprehension.

Subtle Advertising.

A successful hotel manager pointed to the advertisement of a hotel at a fashionable resort. The advertisement read:

"Special rates to single men."

"The proprietor of that hotel," said he, "deserves to succeed. He lays in his advertisement a subtle trap for mothers with marriageable daughters. They read the advertisement and they conclude that, given lower rates at this hotel, single men will be plentiful. They therefore decide that there is the place undoubtedly to take their daughters."

Then, laughing, he concluded:

"These mothers quite correctly believe that as far as their daughters' chances of matrimony are concerned the more the merrier."—Washington Star.

BROOKLYN TABERNACLE
BIBLE STUDY ON
GOD BURIED MOSES, HIS SERVANT.

Deuteronomy 34:1-12—Nov. 16.

"Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of His saints"—Psalm 116:15.

MOSES is one of the grand characters of history. His nobility looms up as a great patriot, general, judge and ruler of his people, and still grander does he appear in his relationship toward God. He was the personification of obedience and loyalty as a servant of Jehovah. In this he typifies Messiah. As we read, "A Prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you from amongst your brethren like unto me"—I am a diminutive picture of that great Teacher, Leader and King whom Jehovah has anointed to be the real Deliverer of Israel and the world from the bondage of Satan, sin and death.

Moses Smote It the Second Time

Any one can see that great faith in God was necessary for the position occupied by Moses. But comparatively few can see the real depths of Moses' character, for only a few realize the Divine call to Israel and Moses' work as their mediator.

Moses, the Servant of God.

We cannot help feeling sympathetic toward this grand servant of God—"the meekest man in all the earth." After so many years of patience, long-suffering and loyalty to God, in an unguarded moment, Israel's great mediator failed in meekness and loyalty. Directed by the Lord to speak to the rock, which on a previous occasion he had smitten, Moses petulantly smote it the second time.

The rock whence came the life-giving stream represented the Rock of Ages—Messiah, who was to be smitten once more. Compare Hebrews 6:4-6.

The fact that Moses was used as a type of the Second Death class in no sense implies that he experienced the Second Death or cut himself off from Divine favor. The punishment he received merely helped to complete the typical picture—he might not enter Canaan.

Canaan Viewed From Mt. Pisgah.

Pisgah is one of the peaks of Mt. Nebo. From it Moses got a view of the Promised Land, toward which his eye of faith had looked for eighty years and toward which he had laboriously guided Israel for forty years. This grand old servant of God, fully resigned to the Divine arrangement, was put to sleep by the Lord whom he served.

Moses' sepulchre was hidden—doubtless to prevent anything of the spirit of idolatry. St. Jude declares that Satan strove for possession of Moses' body, doubtless with a view to using it in some idolatrous way.

Moses Died and Was Buried.

We are not to overlook the fact that Moses died, and will not live again until the Divinely appointed time when, under Messiah's Kingdom, he will be resurrected. Meantime he has slept with his fathers, as the Bible generally records of all who died.

The account of the transfiguration of our Lord and the appearance of Moses and Elias with Him in that vision must not be made to contradict the statement that Moses died and that the only hope for any one is by a resurrection from the dead. (1 Corinthians 15:13,14.) We have Jesus' own word for it that neither Moses nor Elijah went to Heaven. He declared, "No man hath ascended up to Heaven"—John 3:13.

Jesus explained that what the disciples saw was a vision. "Tell the vision to no man." (Matthew 17:9.) Just so the trumpets, beasts, etc., of Revelation are not realities, but visions. St. Peter, who witnessed the vision, declares that it was a representation of Messiah's Kingdom. (2 Peter 1:16-18.) Moses represented one class and Elijah another, as participators with Jesus in His Messianic glory.

God's Promise to Abraham.

At the foundation of all God's dealings with both Natural and Spiritual Israel lies His great oath bound Promise to Abraham—"In thy Seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." This was the first clear statement of God's purpose to remove the curse of death. From the very beginning He had premeditated sending the Lamb of God to redeem the world and to bring in a blessing instead of the curse. Yet the first clear statement of this Divine purpose was made to Abraham, that himself and his posterity should be associated with God in the work of human uplift.

Satan Strove for Moses' Body

In due time the Logos became Jesus, and sacrificially laid down His life. To Him were gathered the "Israelites indeed" to share in His sufferings and death and to be made partakers of His glory. These with Jesus are to constitute the antitypical Moses, raised up from amongst their brethren. Not enough of such "Israelites indeed" being found, Divine Wisdom has been selecting others from amongst the Gentiles. Thus gradually God has been preparing the great Prophet, Priest and King to be the great Mediator.

Looking down on others is not the way to make them look up to ourselves.

At the Theatres.

Mutt and Jeff in Panama.

THE SOISSON.

"MUTT AND JEFF IN PANAMA."

Gus Hill's new "Mutt and Jeff" production, called "In Panama," is blazing a trail of merriment that has never been equalled by a play of any sort of character. There seems to be no limit to the possibilities of laugh producing material to be culled from the famous Fisher cartoons, which are now running in more than one thousand daily and Sunday newspapers throughout the United States and Canada. This season's offering is entirely new, with the exception of the two inimitable droll characters, "A. Mutt" and his little pal "Mr. Othello Montgomery Jeffries." As is natural to suppose, fun is the paramount of the play, and in that respect as well as from the standpoint of a musical production, "Mutt and Jeff in Panama" has no equal in the annals of musical comedy. Mr. Hill has been lavish in his expenditures, relative to scenery and electrical embellishments. It is not at all unlikely that nothing so elaborate has ever been presented at popular prices. The same may also be truthfully said regarding the twenty or more separate and distinct changes of magnificent costumes worn by the chorus in their divertisements and numberless songs, written by the author of so many big hits, Mr. Leo Edwards. One of the scenic surprises is the passing of a full rigged ship through the great Panama Canal and sailing out into the Pacific ocean with our heroes, "Mutt and Jeff" on board. A number of very interesting dramatic situations, containing genuine thrills, are added in order to relieve the strain of incessant laughter. The book furnished by Bud Fisher and Owen Davis, gives ample opportunity for fun of the "Mutt and Jeff" brand. At the Soisson Theatre, matinee and night, Saturday, November 15.

"BEVERLY."

Although several of the big attractions played morning performances during the past season, A. G. Delamater's "Beverly" holds the record, is being the first high-class production attempting this unusual procedure and also for the number of times three performances have been given in one day. During the very first engagement of "Beverly" in Pittsburg, three years ago, the advance sale for Saturday was so great that Mr. Delamater conceived the idea of giving a performance at 10 A. M., another at 2 P. M. and the regular night show at 8 P. M. At each performance the house was completely sold out, so that the total week's receipts broke the record for the theatre previously held by "The Old Homestead." Subsequently, in Buffalo, Cincinnati, Boston and other cities, this same innovation was tried, attended by extraordinary newspaper publicity and consequently increased patronage. At the Soisson, matinee and night Thursday, November 20.

THE COLONIAL.

GRAND OPERA FESTIVAL.

Edwin Lower Hesser, the impresario directing the second annual tour "to spread the gospel of grand opera," has booked the "Grand Opera Festival," rendered by an aggregation of stars from the Metropolitan Opera Company, New York, Covent Garden, London and the world famous La Scala in Milan at the Colonial Theatre Saturday evening, November 22, when the grand opera "Faust" will be sung under the baton of Maestro Arturo Hovi, conductor-general of the Cuban National Opera in Havana, and former associate conductor of La Scala, Milan. The orchestra is a splendid assemblage of selected soloists. The greatest star of the aggregation is Mme. Pater Adalberto, famous for her dramatic soprano roles. She made a great success with the Metropolitan Opera Company. The lyric prima donna soprano is Mme. Inez Orner of the Metropolitan and Covent Garden Opera House.

THE ARCADE.

EVERYBODY SAYS GOOD.

On long cold winter nights it will be a source of pleasure to have heard Fitch Cooper. He is he fellow over at the Arcade that everyone is talking and laughing about. While he is called a comedian other titles fit him as he presents a character that cannot be duplicated. He is the real funny man of Vodvil and his work is distinctive and his act is different. It is clever.

Another feature, "The Cricketpack Four," took the house by storm yesterday. This is the first good quartette appearing this season and proved a hit, receiving great applause for its comedy and harmony singing. Evelyn Ware, the smiling comedienne, was compelled to answer to two curtain calls. If you miss this show don't blame the weather. It seems impossible to excel the Arcade bills of late but next week brings the famous 18 people musical company called "The Red Raven," which is the greatest production during the past two years.

While Old Winter Has Unprepared Men Backed Into a Corner--168 Suits, 100 Overcoats and 87 Raincoats Go Down for Saturday to. . . $15.00

Most of the SUITS are $20.00 grade—our standard. Some are $22.50 garments and a few are from the $25.00 stocks. We've put it this way instead of saying, in all truth, "values to $25.00".

The majority of the RAIN COATS were $22.50 with the small end containing $25.00, $27.50 and $30.00 out-of-stock, full-value rain coats wearable the winter through.

The OVERCOATS were $20.00, $22.50 and $25.00 according to texture and tailoring, graded by the Wright-Metzler standard of fair valuations.

Our regular stocks for the most part, new this season but displaced by garments that came later; some specially purchased—small lots that measured up to our rigid standard of efficiency let in as they go to you: under value. ALL as good as you ever purchased at full price: and ALL are backed with the Wright-Metzler guarantee.

The DISPOSAL is of sound, seasonable, correctly fashioned garments made with back bone and warranted to give full service. They are the styles of today—English-style to conservative suits in wanted fabrics, desirable colors and exceptional tailoring. Belted back and plain overcoats in chinchilla and other textures, many with shawl collars; and raincoats proof against dissatisfaction.
